

LET'S GET TO KNOW LUCKY U

Hello, my name is Dana Faris. I was born in Indiana, being the youngest of three. My father, mother, and two older brothers were from Illinois. The company my father worked for had us being transferred every couple of years. Moved around a little bit. From Indiana, we moved to Delta, CO. My father opened his own shoe store there. While there, Delta being a small town located beneath the Grand Mesa was where I believe my love of country began. From there, we moved to Lubbock ,TX. There for a couple of years, then moved to Littleton, CO. It was then that my mother said to my dad "this is where we're staying. I'm not moving these three kids again." So, that is where we stayed until I graduated from high school. I moved again, to Walsenburg, CO. My oldest brother married into the Faris family which had just built the Marlboro Inn. The Faris's have a long standing in the area with ranching and real estate. I worked for my brother and his family and also married into this family. Getting back to the country, I took to the lifestyle easily. We had our two sons here. I attended Veterinary Tech school gaining an Associate Degree in Science and Board Certified Vet Tech. After many years, we moved to the Denver area. My husband became a plumber and I started a career in animal medicine. From animals, I went into human medicine, women's health, and pediatrics. After 45 years in the medical field, I wanted to get back to nature doing landscape. It's during the many years I lived in Walsenburg that I was able to cultivate my creative side. I love looking at something and making something aesthetic and useful. I look forward to sharing my passions with others. Thank you for taking the time to get to know a little about me.
